They are Now Used on Many Different Articles of Dress.

According plaining is to be need in several different articles of cross. One simple frock has both skirt and bedies made of the plaits. The skirt has a plain hom at the lower edge and no trimming. The bodies has a deep collar almost a cape of heavy white lace, which has its effect of a grape pattern from the eig white rings set on in three-cornered points like hunches of grapes. This collar fits smoothly to give the blighing effect to the shoulders now as much desired, and falls nearly to the walt and haif way to the elbow diver the arm closely, bloosing syst very full around the elbow and fatting the upper part of the arm closely, bloosing syst very full around the elbow and drawn in just below it to the deep-fitting cuff of the lace, which reaches to the chow. There is a soft tucked stock of the crope around the throat and pendent from it pointed shawl, or handkerchlef-like ends of white chiffon fall well below the walst.

WAISTS IN WASH MATERIAL. Many Fancy Woolen Garments Are Elaborately Tucked.

Fall waists in wash materials madras and plane are all fucked or platted in some way, and many of them fasten with the large flat pearl buttons. Woolen waists are also tucked, and made more or less claborately, and it is a pleasure to find one which is simple in design. One little plaid woolen of a soft wash flaunch has not a tuck, only straps stitched along the shoulder seams. It buttons down the front with medium-sired rather flat white pearl buttons with the eye on the under side. There are harrow bands at the wrist, each buttoning with one of the pearl buttons.

PRETTY CHILD'S COAT. Double-Brensted Effect Bas Four Silk Ornaments on the Front.

A prefly jung coal for a child is of white cloth, has a "dicky" and a little standing collar of the material, and fartens at one side. The double-breasted effect is emphasized by four ornaments of silk set in pairs on the front. These are star-shaped, like the star fish in which children are always so much interested at the seashere. Each of these stars has three little acornlike buttons daugling from it, hung on short cords of all. There is A pretty lung cont for a child is of white like buttons dangling from it, hung on short cords of silk. There is a pretty collar

FASHIONABLE NIGHT DRESS. It Is of Crepe de Chine and Trimmed With Irish Crochet.

One nightdress has the royal crows wrought in scarlet silk and gold threat surmounting the cipher, in a rich embrosis ery of emeralds. It is made of the finest crepe de Chine, trimmed with Irish croche about the neck and sleeves. From the throat falls a drapery of the ince, richis embroidered with pearls and gold thread and fashioned with pale green velvet bow wrought in rhine-states.

NEW MOURNING GOWNS.

Crepe de Chine and Chiffon faed in Their Make-tp. New weaves in crepe de Chine and chiffen are now specially creped for mourning gowns. These fabrics are made up without being lined, and the foundation slip is of light-weight toffeta in jet black too of the most beautiful of the textiles for evening dress in "semimourning" is their de such, soft and pliable, but with great strength of fiber. It has all the grave of siden and lisse, with the added firmness of light stiede kid.

FASHIONABLE FALL SHOES. Footgear Is Slightly Pointed at the Toe, With Moderate Heels. We are getting away from the aggressively masculine styles in shose as we have been growing away from the plainest fallor-made effects in gount. Hoose and shoes this year are more or less pointed at the toe, have a moderate heet, quite I we or of medium height, and here and there a Cuban heed is seen. One can lied as high hees as may be desired on the low evening shoes and slippers.

Lower Edge Is Finished With a Narrow Ruffle of Chiffon.

A small fichu-shaped collar of chiffon is shirred in coarse puffs and has a quaint, old-fashioned look. It fits smoothly over the shoulders and is failubed around the lower edge with a narrow ruffle of the chiffon, edged with one row of parrow black velvet ribbon. This is to match the emine tails set here and there on the collar.
There are long shirred ends of the chiffon.

STYLISH LOUIS XV COATS. New Models Are Much Worn by Tall

Women This Season. The Louis XV cost in veivel, brocede, or heavy silk or eathr-fared cloth is one of the most stylish garments of the season, and the new models have the skirt in either of two lengths, and the siexves reversed in ruffs to any depth. For a tall woman of graceful figure this is one of the most becoming costs that lave ever been designed.

I hought a glit bonbonniere
With wide pink ribbon gay:
She thanked me for the dainty gift
In a most bewitching way.
I went in debt for violets.
She rapturously confessed
She doted on the purple flowers,
And planed them on ner breast.

I pawned my watch to buy a fan.
She let me call her Grace
And kiss her in the dusky hall
technid its spangled lace.
But when I bought a solitaire.
Her maiden you to bind.
I found it, with a freezing look.
Disdainfully declined.

Carriage Wraps Are Made of Accordion-Plaited Taffeta.

You may have your long coat as elaborate as you desire, but the plainest ones are considered smart, and that is what most wemen desire in their clothes.

If you wish to be economical get a smooth cloth coat, which can be interlined and used for theater and concert wear during the fall and winter, for the long, loose, plain theater wraps will be as much worn this winter as they were last.

For carriage wear some of these wraps are very ornate. Many of them are composed of accordion plaited taffeta, elaborately trimmed with lace and lace applique, but these, of course, are only suitable for carriage wear.
